Animal Experimentation

Animals are widely used in laboratories. Mice, rabbits, dogs and monkeys are a few examples of animals used by researchers and scientists for scientific and medical purposes. Scientists use the animals to investigate biological processes in humans and animals; to study the causes of diseases; to test drugs, vaccines, and surgical techniques; and to evaluate the safety of chemicals used in pesticides, cosmetics, and other products.

Many animals function like humans so that they can be good models to understand the human body. Some animals suffer from the same diseases as humans do. Animals also carry a number of genes that are identical to human genes. With those similarities, scientists are able to learn much about the human body by studying the animals.

1. What do researchers and scientists do in laboratories?
 - a. Make drugs.
 - b. Do experiment.
 - c. Take care of animals.
 - d. Give medical treatment.

2. Scientists learn about the human body by studying

ELEPHANT SAFARI PARK, TARO

ELEPHANT SAFARI PARK, TARO

The Elephant Safari Park was officially opened by the Minister of Tourism in the year 2000 after three years of development. An official Member of the World Zoo Association, the Park meets International Standards for animal care and is set in more than 2 hectares of exotic landscaped botanical gardens, surrounded by national forest.

Acclaimed as the World's Best Elephant Park, facilities include a full Reception and Information Centre, a comprehensive Museum, with a large collection of Elephant memorabilia and the only Mammoth Skeleton in South East Asia.

A 200-seat restaurant, ideal for large groups or weddings, features an international menu, and the park Gift Shop offers an extensive range of elephant-theme products, including elephant paintings, carvings, clothing, souvenirs and jewellery.

Displays of elephant intelligence and their capabilities can be viewed at the Park Arena, and elephants can also be seen painting at selected times daily.

Without a doubt the Elephant Safari Park in Taro is a MUST for visitors to Bali, and is the ONLY complete elephant experience in the world – making it truly unique.

Bukittinggi
20th April 2005

Dear Ghea,

My brother and I are in Bukittinggi now. We arrived here on Sunday morning at five. It was already busy, probably because of the holidays. We went directly to the remains of “De Kock Fortress” and found a lot of people jogging along this area. We took a rest here, sitting under the tree and enjoyed at the fresh air.

It was almost 6.30. We went to a famous “warung”, called “Pical si Kai”. Here we had coffee, “pical”, “ketupat gulai”, etc. Because all hotels had been full, we rented a room in a house nearby. The room was quite nice. The bathroom was clean enough and the rent was not too expensive.

At about eight we went to “Sianok” valley. It is such a very beautiful valley. On the bank of the valley there is a long cave, called “Japanese cave”. It is very long. It goes deeply into the ground with an entrance at one end, and an exit at the other end. The people here said that a long time ago the cave was used by the Japanese army to protect themselves from the Dutch attack. At that time it seemed that there was nothing in the ground. Both the entrance and the exit were covered by plants.

Well that’s all about our first day in Bukittinggi. We are going to visit “Lake Maninjau”, “Lembah Anai Falls”, etc. the next day. Hope to be here someday with you. Please, reply soon.

Bye for now

Indri
